

BRANNAN OPPOSES NEW DRIVE AGAINST FARM IMPORTS BY U.S.

Ottawa, Ont. — "This country must never again take an isolationist view of the foreign trade problem and hope to find a solution of its difficulties by drawing itself into a shell apart from the rest of the world."

Answers Congressman's Argument
In these words Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan of the United States concludes his reply to a letter from one of many U.S. Congressmen who have protested strongly against the importation of certain farm products from Canada, and seek to have such imports severely restricted, or banned. The Canadian Federation of Agriculture has been privileged to obtain a copy of Secretary Brannan's letter from the Federal Department of Agriculture, with permission to send the contents to its member bodies.

Warm Tribute To Canada
In a trenchantly written letter of some two thousand words, Mr. Brannan strikes back against the advocates of the raising of new barriers against imports of the Canadian farm products referred to. He pays a warm tribute to Canada, referring to its friendliness and co-operation existing in economic and political relations between the two countries.

Keeping the mind of the members of the U.S. in mind at all times as the paramount consideration, the Secretary indicates that both sound principles of international trading, and U.S. farmers own-interest as exporters, make restrictive policies general of primary products on a large ally undesirable. At the same time, Mr. Brannan shows that the imports which the Congressmen desire to restrict total an insignificant part of these kinds of products marketed on the U.S. home market.

Spokesman of 36 Congressmen
The Secretary's letter is addressed to Hon. Charles B. Hovsen, U.S. House of Representatives, with whom 36 other Congressmen have associated themselves in calling for the restriction. They had asked Mr. Brannan to proceed under authority granted to him under Section 12 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933, as amended, to restrict the importation of certain farm products to the effect of imports of cheese, dried milk powder, corn, barley, oats, dried beans, potatoes, pork, pork products, dried and shell eggs, and grapes, to the extent of these studies, to recommend such import quotas and penalties as will permit the utilization of our domestic stocks.

"Relations With Friendly Countries"
In the course of his reply, Secretary Brannan states in part: "The authority to restrict imports into the United States must as I am sure you recognize be used only after careful consideration, not only of the imports in question, but also of the effects on agricultural exports, on our trade policy as a whole, and on our relations with friendly foreign countries."

"Before discussing any of the detailed considerations regarding the importation of commodities later in your letter, I would like to mention some general considerations regarding foreign trade policy of the United States in relation to the welfare of the American farmer and regarding the role of import restrictions in that policy."

U.S. Farmers' Main Interest
"The principal direct interest of the American farmer in foreign trade is in the maintenance of his export outlet. In the last few years we have been exporting something over three billion dollars worth of farm products annually. Imports of all products competing with American farmers have been about half that figure, and have constituted primarily of such things as sugar, wool, and hides and skins, of which our domestic production is not nearly enough to supply the needs of the people of the United States and the high standard of living we have been maintaining."

"Imports of all of the products listed in your letter have been of the order of about one-tenth of one billion dollars, and there is little likelihood of their becoming substantially larger."

Another U.S. Farmer Interest
"Another major interest of the American farmer in foreign trade is that which has as a supplier of the enormous market for farm products represented by the workers in American industry. A very important part of this market is maintained because of the employment and prosperity which American industry enjoys by virtue of its exports and thereby to depress the tremendous domestic market on which United States agriculture principally depends is of a greater danger to the American farmer than is competition from the relatively small imports mentioned in your letter. Hence, the larger our foreign market for agricultural and industrial products, the larger the total market of the American farmer."

Need for Multilateral Trading
"In order that this large foreign market may be maintained at a maximum in the future, it is essential that the free countries of the world return to a system of trading in which there is no discrimination against us and in which

Chamber of Commerce To Hold First Fall Meeting Sept. 7

Wainwright and District Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture will reconvene for their regular meetings on Thursday of this week (Sept. 7th) at 7:00 p.m. in the Legion Cafeteria.

All prospects indicate a lively fall and winter of work for the Chamber, and it is hoped that all who can will make a special effort to get out to this opening meeting.

Pressing problems at the moment include the matter of the provision of adequate housing in Wainwright, the forthcoming drivers' tests in Alberta and provision of rest room facilities.

It is likely that the matter of further improvements to the arena will also be discussed.

Matters for later consideration will include the sports program for the coming winter, the fall carnival and many other items.

The meeting will, as usual, take the form of a dinner meeting, and will be under the direction of Chamber president, J. Davidson, with Dr. J. D. Wallace as secretary.

ILLNESS AND ABSENCE

School records show that by far the most important reason for absence from school is illness. Medical reasons accounted for approximately 80% of school absences in B.C. and more than 90% in Nova Scotia in a recent year.

An overwhelming majority of all these illnesses was found to be diseases of the upper respiratory system—coughs, colds, influenza, etc. Thousands of school days are lost each year, due to these contagious infections.

Trade is multilateral rather than set in the pattern of bilateral deals of one sort or another. We have taken the leadership since the war in setting an example to the world in this respect.

"It has been clearly apparent in the discussions leading to this agreement that the indiscriminate raising of import restrictions by the United States would be a sure way of inviting retaliation by the friendly foreign countries to which we export and of driving them into the arms of the United States."

Weigh Merits of Each Case
"This indicates that the Congress as a whole does not expect this authority to be used on a wholesale scale, but rather that it should be used on a selective basis, the merits of each case being weighed and action taken in cases which are significant with respect to agricultural programs established under Congressional mandate and authority."

Imported More Before War
"Mr. Brannan states that before the war the U.S. imported substantially more corn, pork and other products, foreign-type cheese and dried beans than at present; and that for most of the commodities mentioned by the Congressmen the U.S. imports were less than at present."

NO BLAME ATTACHED IN HIGHWAY FATALITY

A verdict of accidental death was arrived at when the coroner's jury held last Friday into the death of Nick Haidewicz.

Verdict was as follows: That Nick Haidewicz died on August 28th, 1950 at 10:45 p.m. from the effects of a car accident on Highway 14, about 3 1/2 miles east of Wainwright on August 28th, 1950 at 5:15 p.m.

From evidence submitted we find the cause of the above accident was from apparent loss of control of the car after passing the iverson truck.

No blame was attached to anyone by the jury.

TRAFFIC BOARD TO CONDUCT VOLUNTARY DRIVING TESTS

A new three-fold service, designed to minimize casualties and mishaps on the highways of the province has been instituted by Alberta's highway traffic board.

An educational unit, available to service clubs, boards of trade, school boards and municipal organizations has been authorized by the board. The unit will conduct local meetings at the request of such organizations. Its program will include lectures, motion pictures and practical physical tests.

The service has been devised to demonstrate effects of physical deficiencies of which motorists themselves may be unaware. Although the results of physical tests will be tabulated and assessed, the tests themselves are purely voluntary and the findings from them are solely for the enlightenment of the individual concerned.

The motion pictures have been selected on the recommendation of traffic control units in the United States and are informative as well as entertaining.

The physical aptitude driving test employs five different machines with which it is possible to conduct eight separate tests. Steadiness, visual accuracy, glare, night vision, vision judgment, distance, reaction and field of vision can be rated from these units.

Assessment and ratings obtained from the tests are derived from the system originally employed by the United States Air Force on potential aircraft recruits. On the basis of these results certain recommendations will be made to drivers who have volunteered for the tests.

Operation of the unit is intended to be on a full-time province-wide basis. Organizations which are interested in making use of these services are asked to write to the highway traffic board, Qu'Appelle Building, Edmonton.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE EXECUTIVE URGES NEED FOR HOUSING PLAN

Realizing the urgency of the housing situation here the Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture have for some time been working in the hope of securing government assistance in the provision of more adequate facilities for army personnel.

At a meeting of the executive, the following letter was drafted and mailed to the Hon. Mr. McKinnon. The reply received indicated that the matter will come up for consideration when the opportunity arises.

29 August 1950.
Senator J. A. McKinnon,
Room 100,
The Senate,
Ottawa, Ontario.
Honorable Sir:

RE: HOUSING SITUATION WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA.

This Chamber wishes to thank you again for your interest in the problem of housing in this town as evidenced by your reply to a letter on the subject some time ago. Since we last wrote to you the situation has deteriorated further and in the light of changing world conditions we are again contacting you for information.

As you pointed out previously our main disadvantage is the fact that there is only a small number of houses at the Camp and that this large majority of the personnel stationed here are on a temporary basis. We have never been able to find out how or less accommodation particulars regarding the Camp. All Senior officers seem to be impressed with the fine training area but no definite plan has been given as to whether it will be maintained as a permanent camp. Without such information we are unable to interest private capital in the erection of living accommodation and recreation facilities.

Postings to Camps located near small towns are never received very favorably by military personnel, the main reason being the lack of social facilities for families. We are most anxious to have this fault corrected here particularly for those people who are posted to the camp on a more or less permanent basis. In this regard we would appreciate your advice on the following matters:

(1) Whether or not there is any likelihood of the status of this Camp being changed sufficiently to warrant the construction of family living quarters by private individuals.

(2) Whether there is enough assurance that the Camp will continue to be active to give us a basis for encouraging the erection of low rental housing by private individuals.

(3) Whether the progress our town has made since the War. We have a large new hospital which handles military as well as civilian patients and a new high school for the children of army personnel without question. A new Sewer and Water project is nearing completion which, with our present natural gas and hydro systems, will give us a complete set of utilities. Our main disadvantage is the lack of housing which forces many service families to live in very poor conditions here and far separated with the family living in Edmonton or Calgary while the soldier works here.

This matter has been discussed privately with the local government and to the Association as well as the Hon. Mr. McKinnon. Your further advice and assistance in this matter would be most appreciated by our membership and by the Town as a whole.

Respectfully,
J. D. Wallace, M.D.,
Secretary Wainwright and District Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture.

CHILD PSYCHOLOGY

One school of psychologists, for some years prominent in the field of giving advice to parents, used to preach, and probably still does, that children never should be frustrated. The theory was that frustration in childhood would bring on all kinds of undesirable complexes in adult life, whereas, with freedom to do exactly as it pleased, the child, if it survived its formative years, would learn by experience the value of socially useful behaviour, and would become civilized by the time it reached maturity.

The record of juvenile delinquency, particularly in larger Canadian cities, during the past decade suggests that there are flaws in this theory. Adolescents who were not controlled in childhood, sometimes because one parent was in the army and the other had a wartime job, now have to be frustrated by the police when their unrestrained impulses lead them into gang warfare, car thefts and assault and robbery of peaceful citizens.

If they were left to follow the amusements unmolested, these adolescents, it is true, might achieve the status of responsible adults, simply through boredom with their present course. So the psychologists' theory cannot be completely disproved. Society cannot afford the experiment.

If the aim of education is to train a child to become fitted to the society of which he is a part, frustration should be an early essential of his training and it can hardly begin too early. He should learn that punishment will follow bad conduct, while reward, less certainly, may follow good. Parents are safer in following the advice of King Solomon than the fashions of the latest Ph.D. in psychology.

The theory of frustration as a basis of education can certainly be supported by results, for most adults were brought up by the more or less old-fashioned methods condemned by modern psychology, and old-fashioned parents believed in strict restraint of their offspring's natural predilection for mayhem and other forms of violence. One socially desirable result of the old-fashioned methods is that Canadians are, on the whole, law-abiding people. Another result, socially desirable from the point of view of Ottawa, is the physical safety of the controllers and inspectors appointed under the authority of Acts and Regulations for the purpose of continuing indefinitely the process of frustration.

—The Printed Word.

THE WISDOM OF THE PEOPLE

Philosophic optimists believe that the people, as a whole, will always arrive at right decisions for the country's welfare. Professional politicians profess to hold the same belief, strongly when their party is on the winning side of the election, less so when the opposing candidate has rolled up a huge majority. Even communists, whose sole aim is power over others, find it useful to cloak their actions with the phrases of democracy.

Nevertheless, when Canada is at war or threatened with war, most of the comfortable phrases about trusting other people are tossed aside. It is assumed that only government is fit to know what is going on, or to make the right decisions in the light of knowledge. Government, if it be taken to include the cabinet and the upper members of the civil service, numbers at the most a few hundred persons of a class remote from the hopes and fears of the average taxpayer who supports them. Yet, the moment an emergency gives an excuse, this little group, no matter how many blunders it may have made in the past, become endowed with superhuman wisdom and extraordinary powers over its fellow citizens.

It may be that the wisdom of the people is only a superstition and one that can be safely discarded when national emergency permits a party in power to become a dictatorship. On the other hand, the idea that a government is the sole repository of a country's wisdom is a superstition with a flimsier foundation.

TAXATION FOR SECURITY

The announcement of the doubling of Canada's arms budget is not particularly pleasant, but it is far from unexpected. It will mean higher taxation for most of us; but why should it not? Despite the taxes we are now called upon to pay, or may in the future be saddled with, Canadians, as a whole enjoy one of the highest living standards in the world. We enjoy a living standard which enables us to pay heavy taxes, and still come out much ahead of the peoples of most other countries. And let us not be fooled into thinking that we would be allowed to continue in our present happy state if our country came under the control of those who would now like to control it.

Freedom has, and will for some time continue to, call for sacrifices from that which we enjoy it. . . and perhaps the least of these sacrifices is the sacrifice of a certain amount of cash.

We believe that government collections should go even further than is necessary to assure us of national freedom. We are quite convinced that our taxation should be expanded until it embraces some form of old age security plan which far outstrips the present pension scheme.

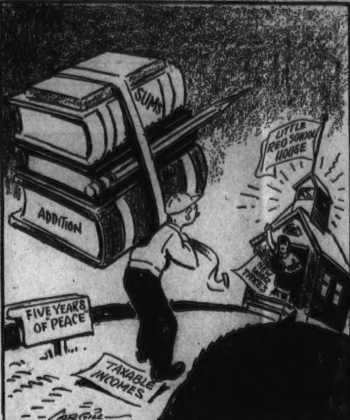

One of the features which drives working men to demand greater and greater rewards for their efforts is the growing desire to be independent in old age. Unfortunately this is not always accomplished by wage increases, for the demands for present spending too often overcome the desire to save in preparation for the time when one becomes unable to engage in profitable employment.

More adequate provisions for citizens who might otherwise become dependent, could do much to remove one of the great causes of a feeling of insecurity, and perhaps add up to a more contented working class, which would be less apt to engage in labor-management strife.

Call it what you like, there is little question that we have embarked on a course that will eventually lead us to co-operative security plans, managed by our elected representatives, which will outstrip the valuable assistance which is now being given.

If we have any gripe about government taxation it is the complaint that the costs of administration are too great. As it has been suggested, Canada could wage a sizeable war, and get its manpower out of surplus civil service staffs.

Joe Rutledge Says

By Joseph Lister Rutledge

Justifying Profits

Many, even among intelligent people, have failed to realize that they have been living through one of the great revolutions of world history. It is not the least significant because it has been an industrial revolution. It has touched every one of us where we feel it most, at the point of income whose growth is reflected in our whole outlook and way of life. In the last 50 years the average wage of workers in the United States has risen from 45 cents an hour in 1890 to $1.33 an hour in 1940. And it is to be remembered that, in each case, the figures are for real wages—what money will buy in actual goods.

This magic was not the magic of unions, as we are often asked to believe. For, though it is true that the workers labored three times as hard and produced three times as much goods with the same equipment he be said to be the sole master of his own fate. But labor did not work as hard. Half a century ago 54 and 58 hour weeks were a commonplace—almost half as much again as the average work-day of the present. And no one would argue that the tools of 1900, even with such added effort, could be made to produce three times as much. What then made the revolution possible? It was that over these years industry was inventing an average of 10 percent of each year's production in new plants, new inventions and new inventories.

Of course, anyone can argue that these are American figures and not applicable at home, even while we know that the pattern of American industry is fairly well reflected in Canada. We haven't as comprehensive figures for Canada. But we have some figures that give assurance to that belief. In 1890, for instance, the average yearly wage in industry was $272. But in 1947, the last year for which definite figures are available, workers were producing on the average seven times as much, and receiving in wages the same proportion of his production, or about seven times as much—or an annual average wage of $1,843 in place of $272. These figures represent, of course, actual wages rather than real wages. The buying power of the dollar being qualified by the increased cost of goods. But adjusted for increased cost of goods, these figures represent, in effect, three times as much for materially less effort.

And the reason again? The reason is also the same, not the effort of labor, or of unions, but the elaboration and refinement of the machine. We can't look back as far as the United States figures. But Finance Minister Abbott has provided some that have a bearing. In 1939 industry expended on new machines and equipment $283 million. In 1949 it used for the same purpose $1,233 million. And still people wonder how profits can be justified.

Tiny "Fire Truck" Tested In Forests

Temagami, Ont. — A tiny tractor, designed to "take the pack off the back" of the forest ranger has been developed for woods transportation in the rugged Temagami country of Ontario.

The tractor, being tested by the Research Division of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, was developed at the southern research station near Toronto.

Driven by a six horsepower motor, it carries loads up to 800 pounds through some of the roughest country in the province. It is intended, primarily, for use during the forest fire season.

On the way to one fire it carried a complete power pump unit, including rotary pump, two cylinder gasoline engine, 1,000 feet of hose, coupling, tool kit and fuel.

On occasion, it has carried a man in addition to the other load and officials believe it could be used as a means of removing injured personnel from fire lines if necessary.

The tractor is guided by one man who walks behind it and directs it through handles similar to those used on a horse-drawn plow. Intricate clutch mechanism allows it to be turned within its own length of about four feet.

When in doubt what to do—don't do it.

One's character will never rise big' or than his aims.

Respectfully yours,

THE WEEK AT OTTAWA

by the Canadian Press

Ultimate focal point of the national railway strike, the capital was on tenterhooks this week.

It was, perhaps, the greatest national crisis Canadians have had to face, even in peacetime, and its effects on the average Canadian threatened to be much more drastic than any that Canada has had to face, even in war.

To meet the crisis, members of Parliament from every corner of the country headed back to Ottawa by car, bus or special airlift, for the emergency session.

The week started quietly enough, although with an evident air of tension. Most people did not believe a railway strike could happen, and the main reason was because a strike of this nature would be so serious that the parties involved just wouldn't allow it to happen.

The unions, involving the non-running trades, sought a 40-hour week with no reduction in take-home pay from the 48-hour week they now work, plus increases of seven cents an hour in some cases and 10 cents in others. The railways offered pay increases so that the take-home pay for the 48-hour week would equal that for the 40-hour week.

A government-appointed mediator, Dr. W. A. Mackintosh, vice-principal of Queen's University, spent little as he sought to bring the parties to agreement in Montreal meetings. As the deadline—6 a.m. local standard time—for the strike neared, the tensions grew.

The mediator met alternately with both management and labor throughout the night of Aug. 21, but at 5:10 a.m. EDT, Aug. 22, it had become apparent there would be no agreement.

Legal Strike
Prime Minister St. Laurent, whose cabinet held emergency meetings morning, noon and night, announced that parliament would meet as soon as possible. The implication was that legislation would be considered which would eliminate the threat of strikes which could tie up the entire nation and bring hardship to all. The number of employees involved directly in the strike was 124,000.

Mr. St. Laurent emphasized at the same time that the union men had broken no law. It was a legal strike. Almost immediately, the effects of the strike began to make themselves felt throughout the country. Isolated communities found their supplies of milk, bread and fresh meat disappearing.

When parliamentarians had to be summoned, there were no telegraphs by which to summon them. The leased wire system of the Canadian Press was used for the emergency call. In the hope that members of the Commons and Senate would be informed in that way.

In every part of the country, people were finding out for the first time just what the loss of railway and telegraph service meant to them. In some cases it was life and death.

Farm Labour

During the years since the close of the war appreciable numbers of Polish Veterans and D.P.'s have been brought to Canada, and placed on farms in various provinces by co-operation between the Department of Labour at Ottawa and the Provincial Department of Agriculture. Some of these persons have remained in Agriculture and some have gravitated to other industries. In general, it may be said that these workers were reasonably satisfactory and that they filled a need.

During the last year the number immigrating under this arrangement has greatly declined, and it is anticipated that the International Refugee Organization, which was looking after these people in Europe, will discontinue its operations early in 1951. When this occurs the movement of D.P.'s will probably cease. In the mean time, some are still available as are also Italian farm workers. These people come as single males, married couples with or without children, and single girls as domestics.

At the moment it is not certain that any more D.P.'s will come to the Province. Whether or not they do will depend to some extent on the demand from farmers for this type of assistance. Farmers, therefore who could use such immigrants for full time employment should contact this office immediately. We are not at the present time accepting signed applications for this help, but if farmers wish to procure it they should first get their requirements immediately. These people are for year around employment only and those intending to keep them for short periods should not request them.

How To Make A Pea Sheller

The complete plans for a pea sheller can be obtained from the Information Service, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Though it is too late for a pea sheller to be of much use this year, you can prepare for next year. You could make your pea sheller this winter when there is not too much urgent work to be done.

Here is a poem I found which is quite nice, and which may inspire you to make some jam if you already haven't.

Ingredients for Jam

Sufficient glasses

And a good sized kettle,

Fresh hulled berries,

Well washed and crimson red.

Sugar, and to put you

On your mettle,

A small boy waiting

With a piece of bread.

Use Of Ascorbic Acid in Freezing

Light colored fruits have a tendency to turn dark when their cut surfaces are exposed to air. Peaches, apricots, pears and apples most commonly discolor during frozen storage, and very often will turn brown when the thawed fruit is served. This can be prevented by dissolving ascorbic acid in the syrup before it is poured over the fruit in the freezing containers.

Ascorbic acid is another name for Vitamin C, and it can be purchased from drug stores in crystalline form.

Besides keeping the fruit from oxidizing (browning) it enriches the Vitamin

C content.

Ascorbic acid may be mixed with citric acid or lemon juice to prevent discoloration, if desired. The proportions are 2 cups sugar, 1 pint water,

1/4 teaspoon ascorbic acid, and one teaspoon of citric acid or juice of a small lemon.

The answer to last week's question is that there are three (not two) tea-spoonsful in one tablespoonful. I hope you all got that one right.

You should know the answer to this one if you have done any canning: If liquid is lost from a jar during processing, should the jar be opened when processing is done to add more liquid?

To Approved Flock

Owners

F. J. Higginson, Acting Poultry Commissioner, Alberta Department of Agriculture, has a word here for approved flock owners. Flock approval will be starting soon, and if you have not already done so, he urges you to forward your application without delay to the

Poultry Branch of the Alberta Department of Agriculture at Edmonton.

Mr. Higginson suggests that at this time you check and cull your flock carefully, removing all small, immature and unsuitable birds that are not suitable for approval. By doing this, time and money can be saved, and the work definitely speeded up.

Make arrangements at once to obtain the cockerels you will need to head your flock, advises Mr. Higginson. The supply of R.O.P. males this season will be very limited. It may be necessary to use approved males in some of the breeds. If you have some early hatched, vigorous cockerels that may be used to head your flock, and at least one eye to each division. After planting the soil around the roots and water thoroughly.

pass approval, it is suggested that you retain them until the inspector has seen them.

Check your equipment, and see that your catching crate is in good repair, disinfected, and ready for use.

"COLD SHOULDER" LINE

LONDON — For formal occasions not requiring full evening dress, the "cold-shoulder" line is London's choice.

One dress may have top which is averaged across to show one bare shoulder

only, the other having a cap sleeve trimmed with elaborate embroidery to stress the fact; another model may be given a complete strapless effect, with a heavily embroidered cuff at the line of the décolletage.

of something to do after it is too late.

OPPOSES NEW DRIVE AGAINST FARM IMPORTS BY U.S.

grassman, the U.S. exports today four times as much as she imports on the basis of the whole of the Congressman's list.

"The imports you mention," states the Secretary, "we're in most cases a negligible factor in our domestic market," being 1 or 2 per cent of domestic production in all cases except barley (4 per cent), potatoes 3 1/2 per cent, and cheese (1 1/2 per cent).

Mailing Barley Imports No Threat

"In the case of barley," Mr. Braun goes on, "a significant quantity of the imports are of premium quality which we regularly import for malting (as well as importing substantial quantities of malt). These imports do not appear to represent a threat to any program of this Department."

"Moreover, as concerns feed-grains in general, a relatively small trade back and forth between the United States and Canada is normal and necessary to deal with fluctuations in the feedstuffs supply and demand on the two sides of the border. In times of severe feed shortage in the United States, such as the drought years and during our emergency wartime livestock feeding programs, we have been glad to be able to draw substantial quantities from Canada."

"Potatoes present a special problem which I have presented to Congress. With a sound domestic program, we would have much smaller imports. Arbitrarily restricting imports amounting to only 2 1/2 per cent of domestic production would not make an appreciable contribution to the solution of our domestic potato problem but would have a serious impact on our trade relations with Canada.

Canada's Principal Source

"In this connection, it might be pointed out that Canada was the source of almost all of the imports you mention, particularly barley, oats, potatoes, fresh pork, eggs in the shell and milk products. In addition, Canada supplied from one-fourth to one-half of the grapes, plucked pork, and American type (cheddar) cheese. Canada, as you know, is a very important market for our agricultural exports."

"Moreover, our overall economic and political relations with Canada are marked by the greatest friendliness and co-operation. Our two Governments are constantly attempting to minimize impediments to the free movement of goods across our three-thousand-mile common border. This is a two-way trade in commodities a product moves one way in the west while it is moving the opposite way in the east, thus saving transportation costs for both countries."

"The Canadians, like almost all foreign countries, have been suffering a dollar shortage in the aftermath of the second world war and have had to somewhat restrict their imports of United States products. They have used these restrictions as little as possible and have lifted them progressively as their dollar reserves improved. If we unnecessarily curtail Canada's opportunity to obtain dollars by selling us their products, that would stimulate them to curtail their purchases of products from United States farmers."

Sports Camera Tom Ferrick Comes To Fore As Pitcher

Any thought a month ago that a pitcher could relieve New York's Joe Page of the role of top Yankee relief hurler would have been treated as preposterous. Not so now, though.

The guy taking aim on that role so admirably defended by Page is Tom Ferrick who put on a Yankee uniform in June following consummation of a deal with St. Louis Browns in which the Yanks packed off four men and cash for Ferrick and Joe Ostrowski.

At that time, many a hoot and howl was raised by New York supporters. These have now turned to cheers—with most of the cheering landing on Ferrick's deserving shoulders.

Tom has become No. 1 fireman in the Yankee camp, replacing for a time anyway, the still formidable Mr. Page.

In the last week or so, Ferrick has been called on three times to pull games out of the fire and he came through brilliantly on all occasions. Wednesday he saved Vic Rasch's bacon with Detroit and Rasch was a 14 game winning—likely to be one of a few to get 20 wins or more this season. More importance can be placed on Ferrick's efforts, too, in that these feats have been made in the white heat of a stretch drive.

Ferrick, though 6-5 on the season, has a 5-3 record with the Yanks so far and at 35, he has improved with age. Should the New Yorkers get to flag this season, some of the credit would go to fireman Ferrick.

There is talk that Canada and the Royal Canadian Golf Association are going to press hard for amateur golf matches between this country and the United States, similar to the Walker Cup matches between Britain and the U.S.

While R.C.G.A. officials are to discuss the matter next week in Montreal, the information from the United States Golf Association is that it has advised until next year anyway any talk of such arrangements.

Charlie Watson, genial president of the R.C.G.A. says the proposed Canada-U.S. matches would strengthen Canada's hand in her bid that the Walker Cup be turned into a three-way competition.

One U.S. golf association official has said he doubts any arrangement restricting play to his country and Canada but didn't comment on the possibility of a three-way series.

Incidentally, two 21-year-old Canadian amateurs evidenced more of their ability on the fairways this week in the U.S. Amateur test at Minneapolis. Gerry Kessinger, of Kitchener, Ont., and this year's Canadian amateur champ, Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver made a fair showing in the tournament. Though knocked out in the third round, Mawhinney carried top-drawer player Frank Stranahan to the 18th green before bowing out one up.

In their development years much of Canada's future in international play in years to come.

In the month of April this year Canada earned in salaries, wages and supplementary income $442,000,000, which was 5% more than in April 1949.

We Should Winter Bees

W. G. McMath, Alberta's Provincial Apiarist, says that there are many advantages for beekeepers who are able to bring their colonies through the winter. The cost of bees imported in the spring is high in relation to the price of honey, and there is always some uncertainty in the supply when you have to rely on an outside supplier for bees.

Considerable testing has been going on during the last few years and satisfactory ways of keeping the bees alive have been found. One of the main difficulties in providing proper winter protection for bees is ventilation. There is always moisture from the bees as they consume their stores. This moisture must be allowed to escape or it will cause dampness, and dampness will kill the bees.

A hive packed outside with about 5 inches of insulation on top and three inches on the sides and having a top entrance, will usually result in the bees pulling through our Alberta winters quite well.

Science Helps In Fight Against Bovine Tuberculosis

Louis Pasteur, the great French scientist, is credited with starting the scientific approach to disease control about a century ago when he started his speech-making studies on what he termed "the problems of the infinitely small" or the minute organisms responsible for causing disease. Since then man's constant fight against disease usually begins in the laboratory with the discovery of some improved serum or technique, which has great diagnostic or curative value against these disease-causing organisms.

An outstanding example is Canada's fight to control tuberculosis in cattle, a disease that is difficult to diagnose and control. The production of tuberculin in the laboratory and the application of the tuberculin test in the field are complementary procedures and each represents a vital step in the eradication of the disease.

Intensive research training is required for those who participate in the preparation and the standardization of the tuberculin used for diagnosing bovine tuberculosis. This operation must be done under carefully controlled laboratory conditions, such as are found in the Animal Diseases Research Institute, Hull, Quebec, the main laboratory of the Division of Animal Pathology, Science Service, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. All the tuberculin used in Canada, amounting to some 2,500,000 doses a year, is prepared in this one laboratory for distribution from coast to coast as required.

According to 1949 statistics, Canada has a cattle population of 8,251,900 and 60 per cent of these come under the Department's tuberculosis control policies. These policies are devised to meet the various needs of the producers and consist of the Accredited Herd Plan, Supervised Herd Plan, and Restricted Area Plan. They not only prove a decided help in selling cattle in various export markets, but serve also as a safe guard in protecting the national health. The success that Canada has achieved in combating bovine tuberculosis can be said to be due to the use of carefully tested tuberculin and the efficient application of the tuberculin test in the field. This is administered by the Health of Animals Division, Production Service, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, the field officers working in close co-operation with the provincial officials in the various provinces.

Only by keeping the problem constantly in view and through the co-operation of all concerned, can the eradication of bovine tuberculosis in Canada be achieved efficiently and at a minimum of expense.

Mr. and Mrs. L. I. Carl and Sgt. and Mrs. Hewson were week-end visitors to the city.

Miss Heather Nelson of Edmonton visited with her parents over the long week-end.

Agricultural Society Dissolved, Property Goes To Village

The death knell was sounded for one of the pioneer organizations of the Chavuin district on Friday last when a meeting of members of the Chavuin Agricultural Society was held under the chairmanship of P. W. Johnson, official liquidator, appointed by the Provincial Department of Agriculture.

While the Society had been dormant for a number of years, it looks back on a great deal of valuable activity, and for many years was one of the leading features in the development of agriculture and community effort.

Organized shortly after the village was instituted, the organization staged an annual agricultural fair for many years. These fairs were one of the highlights of the summer season, and there is little question but that the livestock and other exhibits did much to stimulate progress in the community. The fair not only included the produce of garden, field and pasture, but also included work done in the home and by the young people.

The agricultural society was largely responsible for the acquisition and improvement of the present fair grounds.

At the meeting it was decided that any balance of funds of the Society after accounts relating to its liquidation had been paid, should be turned over to the rest room committee, and that the lands and buildings, the property of the Society should be turned over to the Village of Chavuin.

Reduce The Fly Menace

Eliminate the disease-carrying fly with a combination of regular sanitary practice and chemical methods, urges W. Lobay, Supervisor of Crop Protection, Alberta Department of Agriculture. Clean-up of fly breeding places is the basis of the fly control program. Flies lay their eggs in manure, stock feeds, household garbage and similar places. An hour or two devoted to a clean-up around the farmstead at regular intervals will pay big dividends in fly control.

Spread the manure on the fields where it will help to increase fertility, advises Mr. Lobay, and see that outdoor toilets are of modern deep pit design with reasonably tight shelter and seat construction. Livestock feed bins should be kept dry, and spilled feed should be removed.

Mr. Lobay points out that although chemicals for fly control are no substitute for sanitation, they do play a very important part in mopping-up operations. Among chemicals that may be used for this purpose are D.D.T., Methoxychlor, and Chlorthane. These materials are available as emulsions or wettable powders. Methoxychlor should be used instead of D.D.T. or Chlorthane in dairy barns. Full directions for use of these chemicals in the fly control program may be obtained from the Supervisor of Crop Protection, Alberta Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

In using these insecticides, observe the following precautions faithfully, advises Mr. Lobay: (1) Keep buildings well ventilated during spraying operations. (2) Don't breathe any more mist than you can help. (3) Keep the insecticide off your skin as far as possible. (4) Wash thoroughly and change clothes after spraying. (5) Store insecticides in a safe place where children, pets and animals cannot reach them. (6) Eliminate the fly menace with sanitary practice followed by the use of insecticides.

Like all the rest of Canada we all know that there is a railway strike on. No daily papers, no parcels, no express or freight except what comes in by freight. Strange how many people think that the post office should still accept parcels. "Oh I simply have to get this parcel away. Could you not slip this little one in? If not it will not get there in time for her birthday, wedding or whatever it happens to be. No wonder the postmasters get grumpy long before their time. Let us all hope that it is settled before this appears in print."

Crops in this district gave every promise of being one of the best, but it seems as if there is always a big BUT butting in—the front has changed the picture. Yields will be cut, grasses lowered and the dreams of many rudely shattered. Oh well there is always "Next Year" but that does not pay the groceries.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Macdonald on the birth of twins a boy and girl at the Lloydminster Hospital on Friday, August 25th.

We regret to hear that Mrs. Charles Bennett is a patient in the Lloydminster hospital.

Mr. William McLean Jr. is staying in Edmonton for a few days taking treatment.

Work on the new school is progressing fairly well but the big railway strike is slowing it down in some cases.

"Mary, the Mother of Jesus"—Luke 1:46-48; 2:48-51; Mark 3:31-35; John 19:25-27; Acts 1:14.
Memory Selection: "My soul magnifies the Lord, and my spirit rejoices in God my Saviour." (Luke 1:46-47).

Mary was the most highly privileged member of the human race—the Mother of Jesus, the Son of God. During His years of growth and preparation, she was closer to Him than anyone else and did far more for Him. We may Judge Mary's own spirit and genius by the Magnificat (Luke 1:47-55), which is and always will be the finest Christian hymn.

What about that incident at the wedding in Cana of Galilee when Mary told Jesus that the supply of wine had run out, and did it in a way that suggested action on His part, and Jesus answered, "Woman, what have I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come." The term "woman" was used by an Emperor in addressing a queen, and in John 19:26 is used by Jesus Himself in a spirit of the utmost tenderness. The question literally translated was, "What is there between me and thee?" It marked a difference between her thought and His, and was in no sense a rebuke.

The thought of some people that Jesus meant to tell her that He was no longer subject to her authority is not in the passage. The idea that Jesus intended to put Mary in her place is intolerable. Certainly Mary did not take it that way. What more natural than that she should turn to her Son in a difficulty? She had always looked to Him when trouble arose and He had never failed her. What more natural than that He should want to grant her request. He did in the end, and what she wanted. Why, then, this blunt reply?

The plain fact is that Jesus was startled by His mother's suggestion. He touched a cord in His soul which she did not know was there, and moved Him to the depths of His being.
It was a marvelous communication of love and endowment of power. In the full consciousness of the Father's love and in possession of divine power, He had gone into solitude to think through the problem thus put before Him. He had come out of His solitude with a full consciousness of Divine power at the command of His faith and with the resolution to use that power only in the service of love and by loving means and methods.

Now it is one thing to be conscious of possessing power and another to put it to the test. In this mood Mary suggested a use of His power in the service of love. It startled Him—to put that power to the proof in the bosom of His family by an act of this sort. He had to await a definite indication of the Father's will in this particular case. His answer amounted to this:—Mother, you do not understand me; the moment for my action has not yet come. It soon came, and His first miracle revealed to every open mind whom and what He really was.

John 19:25-27 is a passage of vast significance. As the soldiers were nailing Jesus' hands and feet to the Cross, He had asked His Father to forgive them (Luke 23:34). When the dying thief turned to Him in repentance and expectancy, Jesus had assured him of salvation. (Luke 23:39-41). Then his eyes fell on His mother standing by with John the beloved disciple, and He knew what His agony meant to her. So He put her in John's care for life. (John 19:26-27) Mark it, young people and never forget it—Jesus in the first agony of crucifixion and bearing the burden of a world's sin on His soul, thought of His mother, and gave her into the care of the disciple and friend who understood her the best.

A great deal is being said these days.
Advice after mischief is like medicine after death.
He that will not be counseled will not be helped.
The best advice is—don't give any.

Walter S. Thompson To Be Honored At Retirement

Montreal.—Colleagues from the fields of press, radio, magazines and public relations will gather in Montreal Saturday, October 7, to honour Walter S. Thompson, C.M.E., retiring Director of Public Relations for the Canadian National System at a testimonial dinner sponsored by the Montreal Press Club.

The dinner will be under the patronage of a national committee headed by Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent and will be attended by members of the crews from Canada, the United States and the United Kingdom. The Press Club's organizing committee said that October 7 had been selected to coincide with the conclusion of over 25 years of service to Canada's Railways. After joining the Great Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific in 1914, Mr. Thompson became Director of Publicity when those lines amalgamated into the Canadian National System in 1922. Subsequently he also became responsible for all C.N.R. advertising. From 1937 to 1948 he performed the same functions for Trans-Canada Air Lines.

Recognized generally as the dean of the public relations profession in Canada, Mr. Thompson handled the press releases for many of Canada's most distinguished visitors, including His

Nutritional Emphasis Is Returning To Calories

No simple system has yet been devised for the treatment of malnutrition, says Dr. L. B. Pett in an article—"Signs of Malnutrition in Canada"—in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. Dr. Pett is head of the Nutrition Division of the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. Practitioners and public health officers alike realized the importance of nutrition in health and in the treatment of disease, but they had no adequate systematic information on how to proceed. Information was far from complete on which to assess milder forms of malnutrition.

Dr. Pett writes that malnutrition cannot be properly assessed from one sign alone, or from diet alone, or from laboratory tests alone, because even with all these approaches much information is still needed before a satisfactory system of assessment will be evolved. However, he hoped that the reported tests for signs of malnutrition in 4,000 Canadians would illustrate a method of procedure, and the kind of results which might be encountered in similar group examinations.

The writer reported that "the pendulum is swinging away from the preoccupation with vitamins and returning to emphasis on sufficient (but not over abundant) calories, on amino acids, and on minerals—in short, to put emphasis on the whole thing and a balanced dietary."

"Gone are the days when we could say that the presence of a particular vitamin in the diet prevents the corresponding deficiency disease, and conversely that the absence of the vitamin necessarily results in the development of that disease."

He reports that malnutrition may occur in four overlapping stages:

Inadequate ingestion of food, or of specific nutrients; or the interference with absorption and utilization that permits malnutrition on a seemingly adequate diet.

Decreased bodily reserves; sometimes detectable by biochemical analysis.

Impaired function, even though no tissue changes are noted.

Structural changes in visible tissues. Dr. Pett states further that abnormalities of growth, malfunction of the gastro-intestinal tract any physiological or pathological stresses must be noted.

APPEARANCES DO COUNT
The way a child looks goes a long way toward his acceptance by other people and by children in general. That is the one reason why children like to dress and act like all their playmates. The wise parent permits his child to conform as much as is reasonably possible to the standards of other children in the community.

STAND-INS FOR MEAT
Most alternates are food which can take the place of meat. For example, eggs can double for steak and baked beans can be made do for stew occasionally. Whatever the meat alternate is, make the serving generous. If it is macaroni and cheese, make it cheese and macaroni because it is the cheese that is taking the place of meat.

Better little talent and much purpose, than much talent and little purpose.

The Unification
Of India

The third method by which the States have been brought into the Indian Union is by integrating adjoining States into autonomous units, differing only in certain constitutional details.

Two hundred square miles of States with a population of 24,700,000 have formed five new viable units. They are: Baluchistan (125 units), Rajasthan (13 units), Madhya Bharat (35 units), Patiala and East Punjab States (8 units) and Travancore-Cochin (3 units).

Popular Ministries

Almost all of these States Unions have popular interim ministries to conduct their administration. In three of these unions - Travancore-Cochin, Madhya Bharat and Baluchistan - legislatures are functioning and their ministries are responsible to their respective legislatures. Even in two of the three large States which are still unaffected by the movement for merger or grouping - Mysore and Kashmir - full responsible governments have been established, and the princely no longer rule by "divine right". In Hyderabad, popular representatives have now been associated with the State administration.

By regard to the States merged in the Province, arrangements have been made for representation of their people in the enlarged provincial legislatures, and the people of such merged States can now elect their representatives to the States (former provincial) legislatures in the same manner as others.

As regards the centrally administered areas, the Central legislature has automatically become responsible for their administration. Advisory Councils composed of popular representatives are functioning in Himachal Pradesh and Cutch, and similar Councils in other such areas are to be set up shortly.

The people of these areas will also be represented in Parliament.

Uniformity

The policy of consolidation and demarcation of the Indian States has thus been completely successful. For the first time there will be distinction between the people of the provinces and the people of the States in the matter of degrees of freedom or less on the same lines as that of any Province, and with the fiscal integration of the States on April 1, 1950, there exists now a uniform system of federal finance.

Three clear-cut stages are discernible in this process. First was the British declaration that with the transfer of power to India, the princely States would lapse. It left a vacuum which it was necessary to fill immediately, for geographical spots on the map of India could not become entirely independent just by the British withdrawal. In the next stage, therefore, all the States except Hyderabad acceded to India, giving the Union Government control over their external affairs, defence and communications.

Even Hyderabad, which was reluctant to execute an Instrument of Accession, signed a standstill agreement with India. In the last stage, all States except Kashmir, Hyderabad and Mysore, decided to give up their separate existence either by amalgamating with adjoining provinces or by forming autonomous unions of their own.

Three different methods have been adopted during this last stage. Firstly, 216 States with an area of 1,08,729 square miles and a population of 15,200,000 have merged with the adjoining provinces, becoming part and parcel of the province with which they have merged.

Secondly, 61 states with an area of 63,794 square miles and a population of 6,900,000 have been consolidated into seven centrally administered areas each under a Chief Commissioner. They are: Himachal Pradesh (consisting of 21 Hill States of Simla), Cutch, Bilaspur, Bhopal, Tripura, Manipur and throughout India.

Besides, steps have been taken to fit the Indian States Forces (maintained by 44 States before independence) into one overall pattern for the defence of India.

The judicial system of all the States has also been reorganized on a uniform pattern, and the entire judicial structure of India has now been integrated with the Supreme Court as its coping stone. Thus, after many centuries, India is once again politically one and the organic unity of the country has been achieved. (G.I.L.R.)
